

Mark McGuigan is a native of Philadelphia, PA whose connection to Germany goes back thirty years to when he was an exchange student in (West) Berlin. He has worked in the non-profit sector for twenty-five years, twelve of them in the field of land conservation and urban planning policy. Since 2004 he has worked with German organizations in the United States, most recently as the ARSP US Program's person for public relations and development. He has a degree in International Affairs with a minor in German Literature from Penn State University.